www.atricure.com

AtriCure's cryoICE® probe helps manage post-operative pain by temporarily blocking pain signals from the intercostal nerves. The cryoICE® system delivers Nitrous Oxide (N₂O) within the probe to quickly cool and freeze the nerve within a specific temperature range, through a process called Wallerian Degeneration. Axons within the intercostal nerve are temporarily disrupted near the cryoablation site, while tubule structures remain intact, allowing axons to regenerate and nerve function to resume over the course of several weeks.
